

Free Adventure Game, Books, and More!

Clackamas County Vector Control has a new, free educational video game called “Fight the Bites!” It’s an interactive adventure and story set in “Clackamas Land.” Players help surprising characters stay safe from mosquitoes while exploring science concepts and having fun. Don’t let Mosquitula bite you!

Learn more and choose from different versions of the game at fightthebites.com.

Clackamas County Vector Control also offers free mosquito life cycle kits with live larvae for groups, as well as a free curriculum and more available at fightthebites.com/education.

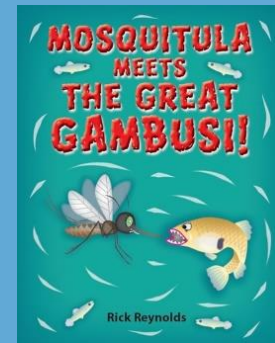

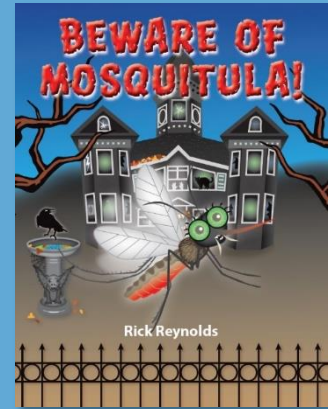

Veteran educator and creator of the game, curriculum, and books Rick Reynolds, M.S.Ed., is happy to lead free workshops for educators and groups. Ask about free mosquito fish, tote bags, calendars, magnets, and stickers, too! Serious diseases such as West Nile virus have spread into Oregon, and our kids and communities need to know how to stay safe.
